AMON MAGSAYSAY was born on August 31, 1907, in Iba, Zambales, the son of Exequiel Magsaysay, a carpenter and successively blacksmith and school-teacher. While still of kindergarten age he was already doing unusual chores for a child his size, fetching firewood and sweeping the floor for his mother, Perfecta del Fierro, and helping his father in the smithy.

Schooldays were hard days for young Ramon. He received his elementary school education under trying circumstances in the town of Castillejos, where his family had moved. He frequently walked 22 kilometers to high school at the Zambales Academy in San Narciso, and as frequently cooked his own food. He was a lanky, shy country lad of 20 when, in 1927, he went to Manila to take up engineering at the University of the Philippines. He did odd jobs here and there, mostly as a driver, to pay for his board and lodging, but soon the strain told on his health and he became ill for six months. Upon recovering, Ramon decided to give way to his inclination for business and he transferred to the Jose Rizal College. In 1932, he marched out into the practical world with a degree of Bachelor of Science in Commerce.

SAN AS SERVICE SERVICE

Starting as a mechanic in a crumbling bus company (Try Tran), Magsaysay injected drive and courage among his fellow-workers, held them together under extremely discouraging conditions. He rapidly rose to become manager of the firm and when the war broke out in 1941, he had transformed the company into one of the biggest successful transportation firms.

This period of his life was blessed with his marriage to a shy, pretty girl from Bataan by the name of Luz Banzon. They now have three children: Teresita, 19; Milagros, 17; and Ramon, Jr., 15. Today, Ramon Magsaysay is profoundly grateful for the indispensable inspiration that is his wife.

The war was another turning point in Ramon's life. He began service as a volunteer with the 31st Infantry Division Motor Pool under Brigadier General Blummel. Shortly before the fall of Bataan in April 1942, he joined Lt. Col. Claude A. Thorpe and a handful of other American officers at Mt. Pinatubo; together they organized the Western Luzon Guerrilla Forces. Magsaysay was appointed overall commander of the Zambales Military District. This put him in command of ten thousand rough, rugged men fighting for survival. The Japs soon put a prize on his head, so that it became necessary for him to keep an eye on the Japs while he was keeping alert to possible abuses by his own men. It was then that Magsaysay learned in the hard way the value of vigilance and quick decision, and the importance of fair play to the man who carries the gun.

In early 1945, Magsaysay and his men led the American forces in the liberation of Zambales; they were subsequently recognized by the U. S. Army as the "Magsaysay's Guerrillas."

On February 4, 1945, Magsaysay was appointed Military Governor of Zambales by General Charles P. Hall of the 11th Corps which had liberated Zambales. He was promoted to the rank of Major on September 23, 1945 by order of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, and honorably discharged from the Philippine Army on February 8, 1946.

Magsaysay's life as a public servant began on April 23, 1946, when he was elected Representative of Zambales by the biggest majority in the political history of that province. In November, 1949, he was re-elected in another overwhelming victory. During both terms, he was chairman of the important National Defense Committee. During his second term, he was also a ranking member of the equally important Committee on Appropriations.

In 1948, Magsaysay made his first trip to the U. S. as head of a veterans' mission and succeeded in securing the approval of the Roger's Bill providing for additional benefits to Filipino veterans. In April 1950, he was again sent to Washington to obtain military assistance for the Philippines. This mission he likewise accomplished with singular success.

Magsaysay assumed the Defense Secretaryship on September 1, 1950, when the Huks were at the height of their power and the fall of the country into Communist hands seemed imminent. He weeded out the army deadwood, whipped the then undisciplined armed forces into line, and sent them out to the mountains after the Huks in a series of relentless drives, employing unorthodox methods that were applauded and subsequently copied in other parts of the globe. At the same time, he won resentful, land-hungry Huks back to peaceful society, by providing them with land and new opportunities through his daring, world-famed EDCOR program.

Magsaysay soon had die-hard Huks on the run, and by the middle of 1952, he had smashed the Communist-led movement into an irretrievable failure, giving Asia its first locally achieved victory over international Communism. His brilliant record of action, honesty and integrity in the Department of National Defense fired the imagination not only of his people but of the rest of the free world as well.

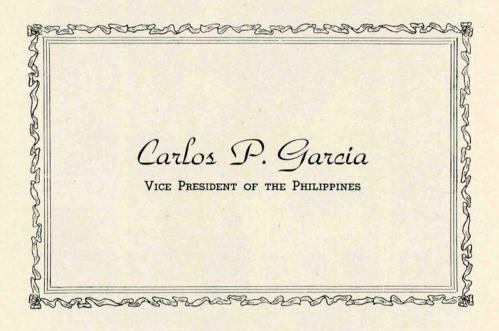

For basic reasons too well known, he resigned as Defense Secretary on February 28, 1953. At the Nacionalista Party national convention on April 12, 1953, he was nominated Presidential candidate by an overwhelming vote. On November 10 last, in a landslide victory unprecedented in Philippine politics, he was elected head of the state—the youngest ever to be bestowed, by popular mandate, the highest magistracy of the nation.

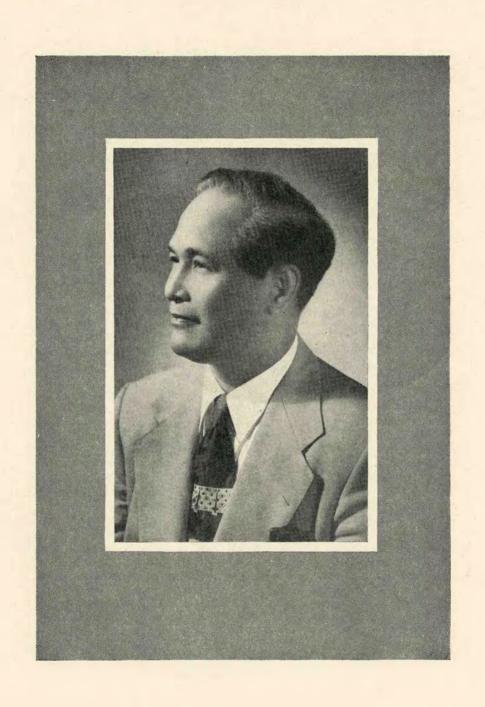

The new President has been variously honored abroad for his accomplishments. When he visited the United States in 1952, San Francisco accorded him the biggest reception ever given to a Filipino. Washington awarded him the U. S. Bronze Star and the Legion of Merit, Degree of Commander, and New York's Fordham University conferred on him the degree of Doctor of Laws (Honoris Causa). In the same year, in Mexico, he was the keynote speaker at the Lions' International Convention, during which he received one of the longest and warmest ovations in annual international conventions. His many achievements have been continually acclaimed by foremost periodicals the world over.

His own people have been no less lavish in their recognition of his unparalleled dedication to his country. He has been awarded the Military Merit Medal (PA); Legion of Honor, Officer Class (AFP); Presidential Medal for Exemplary Public Service (having been the youngest to be so honored); degree of Doctor of Laws (Honoris Causa) from the Quezon Colleges; and many other medals of honor and certificates of merit from leading universities and civic organizations. Earlier in Congress, his public service was distinguished by citations from the Congressional Press Club naming him one of the ten most useful congressmen for the years 1946 and 1949, and one of the 20 outstanding congressmen for the four-year term 1946-1950. He was Philippines Free Press "Man of the Year" for 1950 and 1951 successively, and "Veteran of the Year" for 1952.

Thus, the new President brings with him into office a world-wide prestige, which, together with his high personal qualities and his passion for social and economic advancement for the common man, augurs well for the Philippines the approaching day when her coveted place in the sun among the free nations of the world shall be secure.

The Vice President

公

ICE PRESIDENT CARLOS P. GARCIA, the favorite son of Bohol, was born on November 4, 1896 in the town of Talibon, the son of Policronio Garcia, Mayor and undisputed leader of Talibon until his death, and Ambrosia Polistico.

Young Garcia attended the Talibon Elementary School, Cebu High School, Silliman University, and the the Philippine Law School. He was always at the head of his class since his primary school days until he finished his law course in the Philippine Law School as valedictorian, class of 1923. He passed the bar in the same year, placing among the first ten, notwithstanding the fact that he was taken ill on the day preceding the last day of the examinations, suffering from typhoid fever. He was the winner of Malcolm's four-year law course scholarship prize and of oratorical contests during his high school and college days. He has been Minority Floor Leader of the Senate since 1946, and has consistently been voted among the most outstanding senators from 1949 through 1953.

Vice President Garcia has been a public school teacher for more than two years; six years as representative of the 3rd District of Bohol; nine years as Provincial Governor of his Province; and Senator from 1941 up to the time he was elected Vice President. He was a Member of the Mission to Washington for Philippine Rehabilitation and War Damage Claims in 1945; Delegate to the World Conference at San Francisco in 1945 to draft the Charter of the United Nations; Delegate to the Inter-parliamentary Union Conference at Dublin, Ireland, in 1950; and Delegate to the Southeast Asia Conference in Baguio in 1950. Vice President Garcia is one of our well-known scholars and best informed political leaders. He has made extensive and serious studies in philosophy, history, finance and economics. He is regarded as the Prince of Visayan poets today.

Until his election as Vice President of the Philippines he was chairman of the following committees: Advisory Committee; Committee on Government Reorganization; sub-Committee on Japanese Reparations; and Senate Representation, Commission on Appointments. He was a member of the following Senate Committees: Foreign Affairs, Finance, Public Works, Army and Navy, Privileges and Elections, Rules, Codes, Justice, Presidential Committee on Japanese Reparations, and Senate Electoral Tribunal.

One of his most trying experiences in life, perhaps, was during the Japanese occupation when for three years he was hunted by the Japanese soldiers for having spurned the order to surrender in May, 1942, and a heavy price on his head was fixed by the invaders but he was adamant and immovable and stuck to his decision not to surrender. Thrice he narrowly escaped capture by the pursuing Japanese soldiers during the war. Once he was shipwrecked in 1942 in trying to evade capture by the Japanese but fortunately succeeded in dodging the enemy with his father.

He figured prominently in the resistance movement during the Japanese occupation. He received a letter from President Quezon who was then in Washington confirming and approving the Civil Government of Bohol with Senator Garcia as High Adviser both of the Civil Government and of the resistance movement in that area.

Vice President Garcia is a world traveler. He has not only visited almost every town and city in the Philippines but has traveled in the United States, England, Ireland, France, Switzerland, Belgium, Rome and other Italian Cities, Spain, and Portugal, among others. Aside from being a lover of books, Vice President Garcia is a chess player of no mean ability.

He married Miss Leonila Dimataga of Opon, Cebu, who is a pharmacist by profession and by whom he has one young and charming daughter, Linda D. Garcia, now a junior in the College of Liberal Arts, University of the Philippines.

At the Nacionalista Convention held on April 12, 1953, Ramon Magsaysay and Carlos P. Garcia were nominated by an overwhelming majority as the Nacionalista candidates for President and Vice President of the Philippines. The most decisive majority obtained by Vice President Carlos P. Garcia in the last election of November 10, 1953, is without precedent in the history of elections in the Philippines. It is an incontrovertible evidence of his amazing popularity.

The distinguished record of public service of Vice President Garcia speaks for itself. That he will discharge the duties of his exalted office as Vice President of the Philippines with honor, wisdom and patriotism, the Filipino people who gave him a tremendous majority in the last election have no doubt whatsoever.

Mrs. Luz B. Magsaysay
First Lady of the Land

The First Lady

HE new First Lady of the land is a pretty, shy young woman of 38 who was born Luz Banzon, in Balanga, Bataan on July 25, 1915. She is the fourth daughter, fifth child, in a big family of nine born to the late Jose F. Banzon, a successful businessman of Balanga in his day, and Lucila Rosauro de Banzon who is now 68.

She was married to Ramon Magsaysay when she was 18 and newly graduated from high school, and he was going on 26. The wedding took place at six o'clock of a Sunday morning, on June 10, 1933, at the Lourdes Church in Intramuros. From that milestone dates the beginning of an unusual career which saw her marvelous development from an unknown and simple housewife to a President's lady and reigning hostess of Malacañan.

Her native good qualities and the circumstances of her birth and upbringing seem to indicate a background and training eminently suited to her position and the responsibility it carries. While the fierce light of publicity has been focused more on her famous husband, it has not failed to cast a gentle illumination on herself, to point out the various stages of her story as the earnest and devoted schoolgirl, the modest town belle, the blushing bride, the patient and loving housewife, the guerrillero's calm and courageous helpmeet, the Huk fighter's uncomplaining refuge and, finally, the presidential candidate's gallant and charming asset whose grace and kindliness never faltered during even the most difficult days of the campaign.

Luz Magsaysay was brought up by a strict and devout mother whose teachings centered on those virtues which made up for practical, obedient and faithful wives. On the side, she was schooled at the Instituto de Mujeres in the various womanly arts and the social graces which were designed to serve her in good stead in her role as a young matron with civic and social responsibilities.

The result is a photogenic facade and a calm and gentle surface, a dignity and sweet, well-bred manners apparent to all at sight. Her life as Mrs. Magsaysay, which carried her through many disconcerting, unexpected and extremely sudden crises, has at the same time developed her patience—and her endurance to a point nearly of hardness. By nature she is generous and at the same time prudent, gentle and strong-willed, retiring and yet friendly.

With her children, Luz Magsaysay behaves as a completely average mother. She is by turns doting and strict, approving and displeased.

She has had four: Teresita, 19; Milagros, 17; Ramon, Jr., 15; and Angel, who died in infancy. She has not encouraged her girls too much in their social activities and has given Milagros all opportunities to improve on her hobby: cooking. But when Ramon, Jr. announced he wanted to be a pilot, she ran nearly in tears to her husband and poured out her lament. "One hero is enough for this family," she said. These are the admirable, the useful, and the altogether human qualities which Luz Magsaysay will bring with her to Malacañan as First Lady. With them she will, for the present and for the coming years, set new standards and new manners in that orbit of civic and social responsibilities over which she will preside.

Mrs. Leonila D. Garcia
The Vice President's Lady

The Vice President's Lady

RS. LEONILA D. GARCIA, wife of the Vice President, is a native of Cebu. She is a model Filipino wife: devoted to the home, efficient, good-natured, soft-spoken, and well-informed. She is simple and unassuming and expects no recognition in any social or political gathering despite her busband's prominence in public life.

Mrs. Garcia is a pharmacist by profession, having graduated from the College of Pharmacy, University of Santo Tomas, in 1928. She practiced her profession for some time in a drugstore in Tagbilaran, Bohol, owned by the Borromeos, which was then a fulcrum of social life in Tagbilaran. It was there that she met former representative Carlos P. Garcia and, after a conventional courtship, they were married.

Mrs. Garcia's hobby, besides reading, is gardening. She loves to work in her garden and finds it restful and soothing to spend hours attending to her plants. She prefers a quiet life but because of the career of her husband she finds time to attend to her social and other obligations in keeping with her standing in the community. When in Manila, Mrs. Garcia looks after their home, attending to her husband and their only child, young and charming Linda, who is a Liberal Arts student in the University of the Philippines.

Mrs. Garcia takes pride in the well-known integrity and fidelity to duty of her distinguished husband as a man and as a public servant. Her philosophy is to be happy wherever fate places them. She is doing all she can for her family and for the people her famous husband has sworn to serve, trusting that God will do the rest. She is going to play a very prominent role in the next four years as the Vice President's lady. She has nothing to worry about because her education, disposition and experience as the wife of a national leader will stand her in good stead.

SAME TO SELECT OF THE SELECT O

AND THE STATE OF T

The National Anthem

公

Land of the morning,
Child of the sun returning,
With fervor burning,
Thee do our souls adore.

Land dear and holy,
Cradle of noble heroes,
Ne'er shall invaders
Trample thy sacred shore.

Ever within thy skies and through thy clouds And o'er thy hills and sea Do we behold the radiance, feel the throb, Of glorious liberty.

Thy banner, dear to all our hearts, Its sun and stars alight,— O, never shall its shining field Be dimmed by tyrant's might!

Beautiful land of love, O land of light,
In thine embrace 'tis rapture to lie.
But it is glory ever, when thou are wronged,
For us, thy sons, to suffer and die.
